THOUSANDS SEE MONROE SCHOOL

Comprehensive Exhibit By
Pupils of That Institution
Surprises Multitude of Visitors, Who Inspect
New Building

The most extensive, most interesting and most satisfactory exhibit ever arranged of the work of the various departments of the public schools of Phoenix, was given yesterday at Monroe school and attracted several thousand visitors during the hours the big building was open. Universal surprise was expressed at the wide range and the completeness of the work and the opinion frequently expressed that much of the work would have done credit to adults. That children in grades no higher than the eighth should be able to accomplish such results as shown in the individual articles shown, seemed quite unbelievable.

In the broad corridor of the newest grammar school building, was arranged the exhibit of the manual training department. There was shown an array of articles that would have nicely stocked a good-sized furniture store. For the most part this exhibit consisted of easy chairs, Davenport, library tables, foot-rests, dressers, dressing tables, bureaus, reading lamps, porch swings, writing desks, chiffoniers, stands and what-nots, all of them of exceptionally high grade such as would have been turned out of a really modern furniture factory, but probably in most instances, more substantially made. Even to the securing of the finest finish possible, no detail was neglected.

There was one mahogany piece that was about as perfect and desirable a bit of furniture as one could desire in their home. A reading lamp of oak and art glass was a genuine piece of art. Even down to the fifth grade where the pupils were taking their first year in manual training, there were exhibits of brush cases, match boxes and other small articles that were perfectly constructed. It is too bad the exhibit could not continue longer and that more people could not have seen it.

The work throughout the year has been under the direction of Lester Finch, at the Monroe school, with Clarence Finch at the Adams school and Charles Davis at Central school, as assistants. Over five hundred pupils had articles on exhibition in this department.

On the walls of the lobby and on tables were arranged the art department exhibits. One woman was heard to say during the afternoon that she desired some specimens of the exhibits to send back to her home in Philadelphia. "They really don't know what a school art exhibition is back there," she exclaimed.

The art department has been under the supervision of Miss Cordelia McLain, with Miss Lulu Clark at Monroe school and Miss Ruth McComas at Adams school as special assistants. All the teachers have had classes in art under the direction of Miss McLain. All grades have participated in the art work, from the kindergarten up to and including the eighth grade. Special attention has been given the past year to costume designing, lettering, design, interior decorating and water color and pencil sketching. This part of the exhibit attracted no end of attention and did credit to the ability and efforts of Miss McLain and her assistants, as well as the entire corps of teachers.

The Douglas school had a special exhibit of millinery which attracted favorable attention.

Then there was a domestic science department, which included exhibits from the cooking and sewing classes. There were hundreds of articles of feminine wearing apparel, all carefully and neatly made. It resembled nothing more than the show room in a department store on the occasion of a special sale of the season's best offerings. Included with this exhibit, were several specimens of cakes, bread, biscuits and other articles of food that made one wish it was dinner time.

The domestic science department has been in charge of Miss Florence Graham, Miss Lynne Hillsbeck and Miss Grace Tufts. It was a demonstration not only of the ability of these instructors but of the practicability of the course.

All in all it is safe to say that the exhibit of the public schools of Phoenix has not been overshadowed in point of excellence by that of any other in the United States. Superintendent John D. Loper, his assistant, Prof. Randall, and in fact all the teachers beamed with smiles and justifiable pride yesterday as the throngs viewed the offerings and expressed surprise and appreciation.

Henry says why he deserves his land.

Using one of the government's own allegations in a bill in equity to vacate a homestead entry, Henry C. Heffelman yesterday entered a general and special demurrer to the bill, with Deputy Clerk Bob Webb of the United States court.

In his special demurrer, Heffelman stated that the land was taken up as "public domain" and patentable as such. Yet, in asking for an order dissolving him, the government claims the land is mineral, rough and unsuited for agricultural purposes.

Thus, with the demurring script, both the government contradict itself. The demurrer is signed by Prescott attorneys.

WONG JACK GUILTY—Wong Jack failed to observe the regulations regarding early morning hucksters to occupy their own stalls and he was arrested by Policeman Crowe. In city court yesterday afternoon he admitted his guilt and was given a suspended sentence of five dollars or five days.

BELIEVE FRAUD IS HALTED BY ACCIDENT

That Phoenix has escaped the advances of a hold-up man is evident from the papers found on the person of J. J. Moran when searched in the county jail shortly after his arrest on the charge of assaulting brakeman Hucakaly of the Santa Fe. As the officer was about to take the papers from Moran he quickly tore it in half. County Attorney Clyde M. Gandy, who engineered the search, made a lightning clutch and secured one half and the torn bits of the other half, which pasted together revealed that the man carried a touching letter from an alleged father, in which were enclosed five checks made out to himself and signed by "E. J. Moran," whose signature is given on the letter.

Telephonic communications from the Prescott bank on which the checks were drawn revealed the fact that "E. J. Moran" had no account there nor was such a man in Prescott. The purpose of the letter, the officers believe, was to arouse friendly interest in young Moran, who is a strapping fellow, and to pave the way for cashing the checks. The small pieces pasted together read as follows:

PRESCOTT, Ariz.,
May 16th, 1916.

My Son:

I am very sorry to hear of your misfortune, but owing to the fact of your at—disposition I suppose it cannot be helped. I have complied with your wish to the extent—$23. Mother is worried and wants you to come—She has been sick and everything seems to be going wrong. My advice, son, is to quit your foolish pranks and be the man I know you to be. Although your conduct is not disgraceful it worries your mother and it is to her you owe everything you can give.

Now, son, I have been talking to Mr. Dillon and he promises your place to you again if you decide to come home. Your sister is well and Tom is working every day. I will close with best wishes from myself and I— from your mother. I am,
Your Father,
E. J. MORAN.

Frank Pierce, who was arrested with Moran on the complaint of the brakeman who put the men off at Wickenburg and later discovered them in a Phoenix restaurant, declares he never saw Moran until they met on the train. When arrested here neither man had the gun which Hucakaly alleges was pointed at him in Wickenburg. At that time they carried a small bundle which evidently contained clothes, for they wore different clothing when taken in charge by the officers from what they had on the road.
